

Asian Games 2023 - India Strikes Gold in Men's 10m Air Rifle Shooting

In a spectacular display of skill and precision, India's shooting team has secured its first gold medal at the 19th Asian Games held in Hangzhou. Rudrankksh Balasaheb Patil, Aishwary Pratap Singh Tomar, and Divyansh Singh Panwar emerged as the heroes of the day as they clinched victory in the 10m air rifle men's team event. This remarkable achievement not only marked India's entry into the winner's circle but also set a new world record in the process.

The Triumph of Indian Shooting at Asian Games 2023

The 10m air rifle men's team event saw India's trio of Patil, Tomar, and Panwar deliver a stunning performance. Rudrankksh Balasaheb Patil, the reigning 10m air rifle world champion, lived up to his reputation by securing a third-place finish in the standings. Aishwary Pratap Singh Tomar, equally determined, claimed the fifth spot.

However, the rules allowed only two shooters per country to participate in the individual final, and the Indian team had to make a tough choice. Patil's consistency throughout his series, ending with a total of 632.5, made him a natural pick. Tomar, on the other hand, displayed incredible composure as the series progressed, registering an impressive score of 631.6.

Divyansh Singh Panwar was not to be left behind, maintaining a consistent pace that ensured the Indian team's supremacy. Their combined total of 1893.7 points not only secured them the gold medal but also surpassed the existing world record of 1893.3 points held by China. This outstanding performance left the competition trailing, with Korea finishing second and Iran clinching the bronze.

Asian Games 2023 - India Strikes Gold in Men's 10m Air Rifle Shooting

A Historic Moment for Indian Shooting

The victory in the 10m air rifle men's team event marked a historic moment for Indian shooting at the Asian Games. Not only did it bring home the coveted gold medal, but it also shattered a world record, showcasing the calibre of talent within the Indian shooting contingent. This achievement was particularly special as it was India's third medal in shooting at the 19th Asian Games.

The earlier medals included a silver in the 10m air rifle team event and an individual bronze won by Ramita Jindal on the opening day of the games. These successes have showcased India's prowess in shooting sports on the international stage.

Aishwary Pratap Singh Tomar's Bronze Redemption

While the team's victory was a moment of immense pride, it was also a day of personal triumph for Aishwary Pratap Singh Tomar. Having narrowly missed out on a spot in the individual final, Tomar's disappointment was short-lived. He channelled his determination into the 10m air rifle men's team event, contributing significantly to India's gold medal win.

Tomar's gritty performance in the team event was nothing short of inspiring. His ability to maintain composure under pressure and deliver a remarkable score demonstrated the mental toughness of India's young shooters. Tomar's journey from narrowly missing an individual final to securing a bronze in the team event showcased the resilience and spirit of India's shooting contingent.

The Road to Glory was seen in the Asian Games 2023 for India

As the competition progressed, Patil maintained his consistency and finished his series with a total score of 632.5, a testament to his unwavering focus and precision. Tomar, not to be outdone, steadily climbed the rankings, ultimately securing a total score of 631.6. Panwar's performance was equally crucial, ensuring that the Indian team finished atop the standings with a remarkable total of 1893.7 points. This astounding achievement even surpassed the existing world record of 1893.3 points held by China.

Silver Lining and Bronze Brilliance & Asian Games Glory

While Patil and Tomar qualified for the individual final, only two shooters per country are allowed to compete for medals among the top eight. Unfortunately, Patil narrowly missed out on a medal in the individual event. However, Aishwary Pratap Singh Tomar stepped up to the challenge and secured a bronze medal, adding to India's tally and further celebrating the team's success.

The victory of the Indian 10m Air Rifle Shooting Team at the 19th Asian Games is a moment of great pride and joy for the nation. It not only represents the dedication and hard work of the athletes but also highlights India's prowess in shooting sports on the international stage. The Hangzhou Asian Games witnessed India's dominance in the 10m Air Rifle category, with the Indian team's world-record-breaking performance leaving a lasting mark.

A Fruitful Day for Indian Shooting

The competition at the Asian Games is fierce, with talented athletes from across the continent vying for top honours. India faced strong challenges from countries like Korea and Iran, who secured the silver and bronze medals, respectively. The Indian team's ability to maintain composure and deliver under pressure reflects the depth of talent in Indian shooting sports.

The success of the Men's 10m Air Rifle Shooting Team was not the only highlight of the day for Indian shooters. Earlier in the competition, India had already claimed two medals in shooting. The team secured a silver medal in the 10m Air Rifle Team event and celebrated Ramita Jindal's individual bronze on the opening day. These achievements underscore the growing strength of Indian shooting on the world stage.

As the Asian Games in Hangzhou continue, India has set a high standard for its athletes in the shooting discipline. The victory of the Men's 10m Air Rifle Shooting Team serves as inspiration for other Indian athletes and highlights the potential for more medals in the days to come.
