Given Statement: During a seminar, someone said, "Boys will hesitate to enroll in college if degrees are not directly related to employment." After this line, he continued about job opportunities in all areas to motivate students.

Assumptions:

I. Boys attend college to obtain a job.

II. A degree is useless for securing employment.

Explanation:

The statement makes the claim that guys won't enroll in colleges if degrees are separated from employment. This suggests that a key motivator for their enrolling in college is employment. Thus, Assumption I is implied. Since assumption II is the exact opposite of assumption I, it cannot be implicit if assumption I is already implicit.

Hence, the correct answer is Only I is implicit.
