Difficulty : Moderate

Average Time : 51 Seconds

Sentence Connectors Questions Options

1. Only i
2. Only ii
3. Only i and ii
4. All except i
5. All except ii

Sentence Connectors Questions Solution

The correct answer is option 3, i.e. Only i and ii.

On reading the two statements, we notice they are in contrast- one talks about a meeting being positive while the other is about questioning the viability of the subject of the arrangement. Looking at this, we need connectors which convey this contrast. This eliminates the connector 'because'.

Despite an initial meeting.. which was positive, there are still a range of questions on the viability of the arrangement. Hence it is correct.

Because there are still... a range of questions on the viability of the arrangement, an initial meeting took place which was positive. This does not make sense at all. If there were questions on the viability, the initial meeting being positive does not make sense.

Even though the viability of the... arrangement is questioned, an initial meeting took place which was positive. This is also correct.
